TRAVELING XMAS HAWK COUNTY PART MARCH 18

Monday, March 18, the traveling Xmas party will be made up of the Hancock County Hawks Delegation and the Hancock County T. B. Delegation to the residents of Hancock County.

The purpose of this program is to collect and deliver Xmas gifts to the needy. Everyone who has a gift is urged to bring it along to the service. You do not have to be a member of the Hawks Delegation. You will be paid for the gift, and the date, day and hour will be convenient to you and those with whom you are associated and use your influence in making the public get the greatest benefit from this service.

Gifts are directly concerned with the administration of public health.

dependent upon the citizens in appropriate positions of influence, a health official said. Thus, we must earnestly and sincerely solicit your help in making your community and Hancock County a more beautiful place in which to live, by helping us to find any unknown cases of tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is curable, communicable, preventable, and can be eradicated. With such we are concerned," he added.

powers are as follows: To appoint boards; veto legislation; call special sessions of legislature; make recess appointments; grant pardons, reprieves and commutations of sentences; call out militia in case of insurrection, invasion and disturbance or resistance to legal executions.

Mississippi governors have had an executive veto power since the state's first constitution in 1817. This power is based on the idea of the "check and balance" system. The Governor may veto a bill by returning it with his objections to the house in which it originated. The latter then enters the objections upon its journal and reconsider it. A two-thirds vote of each house is sufficient to override the veto.

If the Governor does not return the bill within five days after it is presented to him it becomes law just as if he had signed it—unless the legislature adjourns and prevents its return. If that happens then "it becomes a law" unless sent back within three days after the beginning of the next session of the legislature. No bill can be approved when the legislature is not in session.

The Mississippi Constitution grants exclusive power in the Governor to call special sessions by public proclamation "in which he shall state the subjects and matters to be considered by the legislature, when so convened; and the legislature shall have no power to consider or act upon subjects or matters other than those designated in the proclamation of the Governor by which the session was called except impeachments and examination into the accounts of public officers. The legislature, when so convened, may also act on and consider such other matters as the Governor may in writing submit to them while in session."

Section 124 gives the Governor power, in all criminal and penal cases, excepting those of treason and impeachment, to grant reprieves and pardons, to remit fines, and in cases of forfeiture to stay the collection until the end of the next session of the legislature and by and with the consent of the Senate to remit forfeitures.

In case of treason he can grant reprieves with the consent of the Senate but cannot pardon. After conviction "no pardon shall be granted" until the applicant has published for thirty days in a county newspaper where the crime was committed his petition for pardon setting forth his reasons why such pardon should be granted. The Constitution does not give the power to pardon.

The Constitution directs the Governor from time to time to give the legislature information on the state of the government, and recommended, for consideration such measures as may be deemed necessary and expedient. No particular time is established by the Constitution for the presentation of these messages, as contrasted with the provision in the federal constitution requiring an annual message on the state of the Union.

OTHER EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

The Lieutenant Governor is elected in the same manner and at the same time as the Governor and must possess the same qualifications. He is the presiding officer of the Senate and where there is equal division in the vote he gives the deciding vote. His most important power is in the appointment of Senate committees.

Provision for salary is contained in Section 130 and provides that "the Lieutenant Governor shall receive for his services the same compensation as the speaker of the House of Representatives."

The Attorney General's duties are not enumerated in the Constitution, except that he is an ex-officio member of the State Board of Education. His duties are defined by statute. He presides over the State Board of Education and is the legal officer for all various state officers and agencies. His powers and duties are defined by statute.

Last of Seedlings Deliveries Stated

The last tree seedling deliveries of the current planting season were made this week, the Forestry Commission announced.

From the state's Mount Olive Nursery, seedling delivery was made to Marion, Pearl River, Lamar, Hancock, Harrison, Rankin, Scott, Newton, Jasper and Wayne Counties. From the Winona nursery seedlings were delivered for planting in Attala, Leake, Neshoba, Lauderdale, Chickasaw, Pontotoc, Lee, Itawamba, Union, Alcorn, Benton, Calhoun, Tippah and Lafayette Counties.

The Secretary of State is elected in the same manner as the Governor, but he is eligible to succeed himself. The office, duties and salary are provided for in Section 133 of the Constitution. In brief, he is to keep a correct register of all official acts and proceedings of the Governor, shall lay the same and all other related papers before the legislature, and shall perform such other duties as may be required of him by law. All of his other duties are established by statute.

Mississippi has two constitutional fiscal officers, the State Treasurer and Auditor of Public Accounts. They are elected like the Governor for terms of four years and are not eligible to succeed themselves or each other in office.

The State Treasurer is required twice a year to publish a statement under oath in a newspaper of the condition of the treasury. Section 137 makes it the Governor's duty "at other times as he may deem proper, to go to the treasury, without giving notice to the treasurer, and verify the balance as shown by the books, and to publish the fact that he has done so, and whether the amount called for by the books be actually in the treasury, and stating whether the treasurer had any notice whatever that the verification would be made."

The Auditor of Public Accounts is obligated to compile and publish a full and complete report showing all of the transactions of his office at the end of each fiscal year. Section 113 also provides that he shall "within sixty days after adjournment of the legislature, prepare and publish a full statement of all money expended at each session, specifying the items and the amount of each item, and to whom, and for what paid; and he shall also publish the accounts of all appropriations."

The Superintendent of Public Education consists of the Secretary of State, Attorney General and Superintendent of Public Education. Although the Board of Education has some duties conferred by statute, most of the responsibility for the operation of the educational system is placed by constitution and statute in the Superintendent of Education.

The State Librarian is established by the Constitution and is chosen by the Legislature for a term of four years.

The Adjutant General is appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate. His appointment expires with the term of the Governor who appointed him. He is not subject to removal except by the Senate.

The Superintendent of Public Education consists of the Secretary of State, Attorney General and Superintendent of Public Education. Although the Board of Education has some duties conferred by statute, most of the responsibility for the operation of the educational system is placed by constitution and statute in the Superintendent of Education.

"GULFTOWN" MISSISSIPPI

More than 7000 Mississippians receive income from GULF. If these people—with their families—were brought together, a city of 20,000 would be the result. A living representation of a company which put more than $15 million into Mississippi trade last year.

The population of our mythical "Gulftown, Mississippi," actually is scattered throughout the state, working at tasks vital to Mississippi's industrial and economic progress. Some work at the oil fields and pipe line jobs, handling approximately one-fifth of Mississippi's oil output. Others are employed by Gulf's sales division, by its distributors and dealers, and some 5000 Mississippians receive royalty and rental payments from GULF.

As a result, thousands of Gulf's Mississippi families have a part in the continuing development of their state's oil and gas resources. They, too, with friends and neighbors, are contributing to the productive work and financial well-being of their state's economy.

seed, fertilizer, and equipment dealers, the Sea Coast Echo, Hancock County Eagle, the Picayune Item and The Conservation News for publishing news articles and educational materials, assimilated for the public benefit.

Since the farmers of the District have shown more interest in livestock, we shall strive to have more and better pastures in 1953.

Woodland management is one of our primary interests. Inasmuch as a majority of the District's land is best suited for trees, we will strive to conserve and improve our forests. Among the practices to be stressed this year will be fire protection, selective cutting, and tree planting.

Committee and have always evidenced an interest in this very important industry which is so vital to our economy here in South Mississippi. I was also a member of the Ways and Means Committee, the Judiciary Committee, the Fisheries, Commerce and Shipping Committee, the Committee on Interstate Corporation, and the Highways and Highway Financing Committee, all of which are very important to our section of the state. As a member of these committees, I had a part in most of the beneficial legislation which became law.

"At the present time, I am serving as Senior Vice-President of the Mississippi State Bar Association, president of the Wiggins Rotary Club, and I am a member of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, which organization I formerly served as State Judge Advocate, and as previously stated, I am now serving as your District Attorney. I am a Mason and a member of the First Baptist Church of Wiggins.

"I deeply regret that the time in which to make this campaign is so very limited, because in the years that I have served in public office I have developed an unswerving faith in the importance of personal contact with the people whom one serves or desires to serve. My duties and the little time remaining will not permit me to cover this large district. I earnestly invite you to investigate my record of public service and my qualifications for this office, and if you believe that I will make you a good District Attorney in the years ahead, then I would appreciate your support and influence in the election on March 31, 1953."

A high-contrast, black and white photograph of a dark, textured surface, possibly a book cover or a piece of fabric. A vertical line runs down the center, dividing the image into two halves. The texture is grainy and uneven, with many small, light-colored specks and fibers visible against the dark background. The lighting is dramatic, creating deep shadows and bright highlights that emphasize the surface irregularities.
